An Old Time Bout in Which an Innocent Sitter Suffered.

(New York Sun.)

THE crops had been harvested and shipped to the market from the whole of the St. Francis valley, and payment therefor had been dely made, at rates somewhat in advance of what had been expected. This stroke of good fortune, coupled with the fact that nature had been kind, so that the crops exceeded in amount any harvesting for several years, had brought throughout a season of unusual prosperity throughout the entire Sunken Lands of Arkansas.

Naturally, the cotton factors in New Orleans and elsewhere had reaped the greatest advantage of all concerned, but even after the uttermost exactions of their mortgages had been met, there still remained a considerable balance to the credit of the owners of the soil, so that there was real money in circulation among them in greater amounts than they had been accustomed to for a long time.

It was also true that there was no very good prospect of this money remaining in possession of the St. Francis people for long. Their immediate necessities were provided for, and all their pressing obligations had been met, so that they might have used the cash in hand, had they been so minded, to pay the expenses of the coming year, and by so doing, they could have retained an ownership in the next crops to come, without being obliged to mortgage them. That, however, was not the St. Francis way,

Such a one was John Brannigan, who arrived at the village of Baxters one Friday evening, astride of a large black horse, and having stabled it at the tavern was soon installed as a guest of the Brannigan was a powerfully built, well-dressed man, perhaps 40 years old, who might have been of the nationality his name denoted, but spoke the Eng-lish of the locality without a brogue. lish of the locality without a brogue. His manners were quiet and sufficiently good, but no one who was in the least familiar with his type could have mistaken him for a moment for anything else but a gambler. Nor did he seek to disguise his calling, but soon after eating his supper he asked the landlord if there were any people around who ever played poker. It was, of course, a platitude, since poker is as surely one of an Arkansas citizen's accomplishments as is horsemanship.

Vell, eyes, the landlord admitted, there was most generally a game going

As a sequence to all this it occurred, toward 8 o'clock that Mr. Brannigan was seated at a round table in the back room mentioned, in company with four other players. Judge Harmon, the oldest in the party, was a grizzled veteran who owned property and no longer sat who owned property and no longer sat in court. Jack Gannon, the second man, was a planter, who had not yet mar-ried, whose presence at home after he had sold his crops was only explained by the fact that he had broken his leg a while before and was not yet able to travel to New Orleans for the winter. The storekeeper, a man named Cater, and the landlord, whom everybody called "Jim," were the other two players. Three or four other men were in

"We play table stakes," said the judge, "sometimes for more and sometimes for less, but I feel like I'd enjoy a good game tonight. Suppose we start with a hundred aplace?"

Everybody agreed, and the landlord, as banker, counted out the chips accordingly, whites $1. reds $5 and blues $20 aplace. Brannigan wan interest $20 aplace. Brannigan wan beautiful the state of the hips accordingly, whites $1. reds $5 and blues $20 aplace. Brannigan wan beautiful the state of course, but it did not east and the invitation was accepted as a matter of course, but it did not escape general notice that he drank very sparingly himself, though he swallowed his whisky as if he were well accustomed to its use.

For perhaps half an hour the game went on without any incident of special note. The play was high from the first, the auge being two calls five, and jackpots following the buck, with an extra one whenever threes or better were shown. The luck varied, however, so that there was nestriy $1,000 on the table, but it was well distributed.

Brannigan had played as fairey, as any one could play, and one who had in mind to attempt anyting crooked, he was any one could play, and red being two about it slowly, and and feli to one of the other players, he backed it with extra caution.

At length there came an opening for a strenous contest among three players, he backed it with extra caution.

The gambler had been a winner up to that time, and his winnings were sone with his investment of $200, but he smiled as pleasantly as if he had won the pot and called for $500 more in chips. Had the others known him better they would have known that he had reached the danger line.

The play went on, harder than ever for a dozen rounds, and once more Brannigan was ahead of the game. They noticed that he was holding phenomenally good cards and they watched him closer than ever, to see,

At length, however, there came a struggle on his deal, Gannon had three kings and opened a jatkpot, later stayed, and Brannigan raised. The judge stayed and the landlord dropped out. Gannon and Cater made good.

On the draw the judge called for one card, Gannon took two, Cater two, and the dealer one. Before he could lift it from the table, however, Gannon, who had been the most suspicious of all of them, shouted with an oath:

"That card came from the bottom of the deck, and it's a red ace." And he reached over and turned it up. It was the ace of hearts.

"I've caught you," he started to say, but before he could finish his sentence Brannigan's gun was out and was leveled at him.

"Take that back, or I'll blow your head off," he exclaimed, black with rage. "No man can call me a cheat and live. Take it back."

"Take back nothin'" said Gannon, reaching for his own gun. It would have been of no use to him had he drawn it, however, for before he could get it out of his pocket the other man pulled his trigger. At the same instant one of the bystanders struck his hand from behind and the shot missed Gannon.

This was the lettering upon a rough pine slab erected in the little cemetery at Charlotte by Steve Marshall, an old lake captain, away back in the '35% after the body of the ill-fated jumper had been taken from the Genesee river and buried in the village cemetery without ceremony of any kind.

This board stood at the head of Patch's grave until the semi-centennial celebration in Rochester. Then profane hands were laid upon it. The roughly hewn slab was exhibited. After the celebration it was not replaced. It was either lost or seized upon by some relic hunter who cherishes it in secret.

Since Marshall's hand raised that slab no one has ever taken the trouble to mark the grave in any way. Old residents of Charlotte knew of the location by two old stumps, but within the last two years these stumps have rotted away. The grave is now unanarked. Wild blackberry bushes are marked over the soot.

The fame of Sain Patch, such as it was, has probably penetrated further than that of any other person who ever made Rochester his abiding place. The exploits of Sam were selzed upon by wome rell was the process of the son. Here are two lines from the "Gonese rive" and stady of nerve, Historians of supposition of any size. In treating stricture with sounds there will not be even temporary benefit unless the sounds are large enough to break the small tissue fibres. If broken, they must, of course, heal again, and this leaves a firmer stricture than before. The same argument applies to cutting or mechanical abuse of the urethral walls in any other way. Stricture is simply scar tissue from injury or improper treatment, and the forms of procedure just mentioned will not lessen the amount of scar tissue after recovery from such an operation, if, indeed, recovery is ever complete.

Notwithstanding the small area involved in these operations, the popular text books support the fear that death not infrequently follows an operation of this character. If there were no better means of curing a stricture than by an operation, the ultimate consequences of a stricture—the destruction of the sexual function and the reflex nervous troubles—that invariably follow neglected cases, would really justify the risk, PROVIDED A CURE WAS CERTAIN; but I reseat that a permanent cure is the exception when surgical means are relied upon. I am not dogmatic enough on this subject to accept the theory that scar tissue can be removed by producing more. My treatment for stricture consists of a harmless method each night at bedtime by the patient himself, without knife or sounds, and I guarantee to remove with-

Nervo-Sexual Debility It is sad to contemplate the unfortunate condition of so many men of our day and generation. At 30 they feel 50; at 40 they feel 60, and at 50 or 60, when they should be in the very prime of life, they are almost ready for the grave. The fire of youth has gone out, the fountain of vitality is exhausted. Premature old age.

Physicians baffled by stubborn cases are cordially invited to consult me by special appointment.

No matter what brought it on, the one thing for you to do is to get back the vim, the vigor and the vivacity of youth. Don't lose your grip on life. There are yet many happy years for you only get help. I can and will not only help you, but cure you to stay cured. Curing diseases and weaknesses of the sexual and urinary system has been my exclusive business for the past twenty-five years, during which time I have lifted up enough fallen men to make an army.

My treatment will restore you to what you have lost—your manhood. It stops all unnatural discharges and drains of vigor, and gives perfect and permanent power to the sexual organs. It makes the blood pure and rich, the complexion clear, the eyes bright, the flesh firm, the muscles solid and the nerves strong and steady. It clears up the clouded brain, brightens the intellect and dispers all despondency.

HOME TREATMENT.

I prefer that each patient desiring my cure pay me at least one personal visit, but if you cannot conveniently do this, write me in your own language a plain and full statement of your symptoms.

Many cases can be cured by my original system of correspondence, which is so nearly perfect in its operations that satisfactory results are always assured.

Varicocele

In the cure of varicoccle I use no knife and do not draw a single drop of blood. If you come from a distance there will be no reason why you cannot return on the next train, satisfied from your own standpoint of reasoning that the cure will be complete in one week. It makes no difference how much chicanery, electric belts, or other fake forms of treatment you have encountered in your fruitless efforts to obtain a cure, I will cure you in one week so that you do not have to depend upon the filmsy promises of Pretenders for results that never come.

I want to talk or write to every man who is suffering from the above diseases, and who feels that he is not up to the proper standard of health, vitality and manhood. These diseases will not cure themselves, but, on the contrary, will become more aggravated. I will explain how these insidious diseases are a constant menace to your health, and why it is essential to your future welfare that you be cured at once. Good health is the greatest blessing any man can possess; it is necessary to the enjoyment of happiness and success in life. Without it life becomes a miserable existence, devoid of pleasure, a hollow mockery filled with suffering and misery.

Specific Blood Poison

Like leprosy of old, Specific or Contagious Poison in the blood was for ages supposed to be incurable.

This ancient idea is not yet altogether extinct. It still exists in the minds of many old fogy physicians, who continue to salivate their patients with potash, mercury and other dangerous mineral mixtures, which, instead of forcing the disease out of their system, drive it deeper in, where it lies dormant for a time and then breaks out again in the form of some frightful skin, blood or bone disease.

I cure Specific Blood Poison to stay cured forever. I challenge the medical world for a case in any stage, hereditary or contracted, that I cannot positively cure, never to return, in from 30 to 90 days. My treatment for this disease is endorsed by the best physicians of America and Europe. It is purely vegetable in composition and perfectly harmless in effect. More than 1,000 men, many of whom have tried hot springs and numerous specific remedies in vain, have been completely and forever cured by me during the past year.
